

Lindbergh Hops Off Unaccompanied In Non-Stop N. Y. To Paris Flight Slayer Attempts to End Life Rather Than Face Trial for Murder

ROOSEVELT FLYING FIELD, N. Y., May 20 (I.N.S.)—Praying the perils of rain storms and fog over the North Atlantic, Captain Charles A. Lindbergh, the young dare-devil American aviator, hopped off on the 3,600 mile, non-stop, trans-ocean flight for Paris this morning in his Ryan monoplane "Spirit of St. Louis." Lindbergh took the air at 7:52 o'clock.

The take-off was sudden and unexpected, entirely in keeping with Lindbergh's desire to get away on his great adventure with the least amount of excitement. It was all in the day's work with him. Sudden activity was noticed in his hangar early this morning, and a crowd began to collect. The machine finally was taken over to the long get-off runway at Roosevelt Field, and the gas taken aboard.

Lindbergh tested his struts, and went over his plane carefully, and the watchers increased to well over 3,000. As soon as the gas was aboard he climbed to his place, and the engine roared. After a few minutes of warming up, Lindbergh turned to his mechanics and waved that he was about to take off.

As he "gave it the gun" he smiled calmly at the excited crowds, waved to Byrd and other friends, and roared on his way.

Flying alone and carrying only sandwiches, a few chocolate bars and some distilled water, Lindbergh departed, in misty weather. Rain earlier in the night had ceased at 4 o'clock.

His machine had been brought here from its hangar at Curtiss Flying Field at 4:30 o'clock in order to take advantage of the specially prepared runway nine-tenths of a mile in length.

The "flying fool" travelled almost a mile, nine-tenths to be exact, before his plane rose from the ground. He flew very low, and passed out of sight of the thousand of watchers at the field at an altitude of only 200 feet.

The first of the men who for days have been waiting for good weather to make the hop off on the long 3,600 mile flight headed straight east as he took to the air. The young pilot of the Spirit of St. Louis had planned to circle the field three times as a final engine test before starting out on his lone flight, but he evidently changed his mind after leaving the ground, and decided to be on his way without any more delay.

Commander Richard Byrd, who plans to hop off soon in his giant Fokker on the similar expedition, waved good-bye to the young St. Louisian. "Good luck, old man," he shouted, "I'll see you in Paris."

Lindbergh only grinned. A great cheer rose from the packed thousands of watchers on the field, who were held back by heavy police detachments, as the silver colored plane, glinting in the faint sun which shone through a fast disappearing mist, rose from the ground, its engine roaring a last farewell.

Lindbergh's plane carried a total weight of 5,130 pounds, said by officials to be the heaviest load ever taken off the field by a monoplane. The final load of gasoline had been taken aboard just before the start.

Among those to wish the young aviator good luck on the non-stop flight to Paris, a feat which never yet has been accomplished, was Clarence Chamberlin, who had hoped to take off on the 3,600 mile hop before this in the Columbia Aircraft Corporation's Bellanca monoplane. Chamberlin's flight is held up by litigation between the corporation and Lloyd Bertaud, his co-pilot. Bertaud was not at the field this morning.

Lindbergh, who was hardly known to the general public until a short time ago when he made a sensational trip across the country from San Diego in two hops, carried almost no provisions with him. He had a few sandwiches and some water. Not even coffee was taken to assist him on the long trip, which it is hoped will end Sunday morning when the "daredevil" lands in Paris.

Personal Notes

—Dr. and Mrs. William C. LeCompte, Burgess and Mrs. Clifford L. Anderson, Mrs. Maud Morris and Mrs. Louis C. Spring, of Radcliffe street, were Sunday dinner guests of Miss Emily Berger, of Newark, N. J.

—Mrs. Fred Brown, of Trenton, N. J., passed Sunday at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mary Dugan, of 633 New Backley street. Mr. Brown spent the day in Bridgewater, Pa., visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brown.

—Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reardon, of Belmar, N. J., motored to Bristol on Sunday and spent the day as the guests of their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Vansant, of Wilson street.

The many articles of baked goods, and other good things that will be offered for sale at the Industrial Insurance Company office, Mill street, tomorrow, will indeed be appetizing. The sale, which is to be conducted by the Girl Reserves of the Bristol High School, will commence at 11 a. m.

A Bear Hunt In Black Forest

This is one of a series of articles written by members of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association and which appear every Friday in the Courier.

By W. H. Baines, Jr.

Early in November of 1925, Dad, Ginnie and I met the boys aboard a P. R. R. train, all heading north with bodies aglow with the hunting spirit so outstanding among true sportsmen. There were Les, Ginnie, Fats, Asa, Dad and I. We retired for the night only to wake up the following morning to find ourselves waiting for Eagle Eye (our guide) who was to drive us some twenty miles into the wildest section of this state. Eagle Eye, as we called him, received his name from the manner in which he was able to handle his old .38-40 Marlin, a crackshot. After listening to their tales of woe, that is the natives of that section, that the bears were not as plentiful as we surmised due to the fact that this year brought very little shackle for them, we decided to stick it out. We donned our paraphernalia and soon were headed true north to battle the bruins of Nelson Run. This run, or draft, as one may call it is some seven miles long, heavily brushed, making it almost impassable in places. Here is where I must include Ginnie, the guide's dog, who was to do the officiating of the day. Well, Eagle Eye placed his men as wanted taking me along with him to drive. Terms "Standards" and "Drivers" are bits denoting those hunters watching in shooting distance of the paths most frequented by bear when alarmed and others who immerse in the brush and frighten the game, or in other words try to head the game towards the standing men. Well, to make a short story, all we got that day was, as far as I can remember, a good day's work keeping up with the guide.

The following morning found us around the campfire prepared for another day's hunt. This time we were obliged to contend with the hazards of snow laden mountains, and anyone who has hunted in Potter County in territory of First Fork, Costello, Wharton and Fishbasket Hollow, will readily understand what we were forced to contend with. Anyway, we took the Old Creek Trail leaving it at Skunk Bridge, turning right in a northwesterly direction to Cooney Hollow. We were then placed while Eagle Eye and his dog, Ginnie, were going to drive the Low Ridge Chestnut Swallow devoting some two hours or so. Hardly had he disappeared when Ginnie took off to the east with a bruin sounding the complete trip. He circled below the Ram Ridge when Eagle Eye cracked twice in succession. Hearing no more manipulation, decided he must be down when suddenly Ginnie to my right opened up with his "Corn Sheller." 30-40 Krag with a clean miss and I followed with the same result. The bear made a complete circle returning to Eagle Eye who downed him and then finished him with his Colt. Now some one must prepare him for camp and after a little debating, Ginnie and Dad did the deed. The following day found us still in the hunting spirit, yes, very much, and our bag much limited also. I was on "stand" this day when I was obliged to bag a 25 pound coon up an old pin oak. Ginnie had been working and when in but a few feet of me lifted nose in air as if something might be in her immediate vicinity. By luck, nothing more, I managed to spot Mr. Coon and with a pill from my 30-06 sport I soon cut the distance between us two to nothing. Well, we then had no shooting till our next to last day in camp when we decided to get after the grouse, and boys, when it comes to operating a machine gun, you should see Fats with his Winchester, up a draft, after these sick articles. Well, sir, he can imitate an army in action quite nicely. It was this day Eagle Eye bagged two nice red fox while stalking grouse. Our bag limit, 15 grouse and 2 fox. Next day still in mind to try a change, we got after the black and fox squirrels. We stayed our limit and returned with the limit of these crafty little animals. After this hunt, covering approximately 14 miles, mostly in the going and coming, we were much pleased with our entire trip, the thoughts of having to leave for home shadowing it, but we decided to pull camp. In the complete hunt our party had bagged 1 bear, 1 coon, 2 fox, 15 grouse and 36 black and fox squirrel. Large or small, as anyone may think, it is not the pure lust to kill or ruin that you find in a true sportsman, but the love for rod and gun, plus outdoor life.

The following day found us back at our daily tasks, tired, but well pleased, and ready for the hunt of 1926 to draw near.

STUDENTS' WORK IS NOW ON DISPLAY

Work Done by Students Attracts Much Favorable Comment

A CREDITABLE SHOWING

The displays of art, sewing, manual training work and mechanical drawings in the windows of several merchants about Bristol bespeak much credit for the students of the Bristol High School and the junior high school.

All day yesterday the boxes were unpacked, correct names of the individual executing the work were placed on the pieces, and the display was completed. Since that time scores upon scores of people have stopped in front of the show windows in the central portion of the town and gazed with wonder and pleasure at the articles there shown.

The display will last until Monday at the business establishments of Clarence W. Winter, John F. Smoyer, Mill street; Spencer & Sons, Mill and Radcliffe streets; A. F. Winterstein and Fabian's Drug Store, Radcliffe street.

In the sewing department of the local schools, dresses, night-dresses, kimonos, many articles of underwear, handkerchiefs, jackets and aprons were cut out and tastefully sewn together. Laces, embroidery, and flowers have been brought into play for the trimming of these garments, and the work has been executed in a very neat and attractive manner.

In many cases the girls of the classes would take material to the school, sewing during the period allotted to that work. When the garments are completed the young ladies are permitted to use same, unless the material has been provided by the Bristol Branch of the Needlework Guild, in which case the pieces are turned over to that organization for distribution.

FIGHT NEWS

The fight fans will have an opportunity to get all the thrills that go with a prize ring contest tonight if they listen in over Tomesani's big radio, broadcasting the Sharkey-Malone fight, blow by blow and round by round, direct from the ring side at the Yankee Stadium, New York, through Station WJZ, Major J. Andrew White, the man who told such a vivid story of the Tunney-Dempsey fight last fall from the Sesqui Stadium, will tell the story tonight in his pleasing way, starting at 9:30 daylight saving time.

LARGE CROWD SEES THIRD WARD WIN BY NARROW MARGIN

Kelly Was Green, On Bases Alone; Riola Knew It, So Brought Him Home

500 FANS SEE BATTLE

Exciting and Amusing Plays Are Plentiful During Contest

Despite the chill of a cloudy evening, in which rain and darkness luckily failed to mar the contest, fully five hundred baseball fans witnessed the Third Ward-St. Ann's game on the latter's new field last night, when Third Ward nosed out their opponents by one run in the fifth and last inning of the fray.

Exciting and amusing plays prevailed from start to finish, and it is very doubtful if a more enjoyable game will be witnessed on St. Ann's field this season.

The first amusing incident took place when F. Fields hopped off a train, his clothes covered with white-wash, lime and paint, just in time to jump into the game, and all out of breath.

Others were Green's innumerable foul strikes until Castor eventually disposed of him; Rago was next with a little comedy when he decided to commit petty larceny by stealing from first to second in the second inning, but after being chased back and forth by six opponents, he finally dived between a pair of legs and was pronounced safe on second by "Red" Waters. "Fudge" Missera, in the second, and with all bases full, pulled a stalling stunt, and during a little banter between him and the catcher, "Robber" Rago again stole, this time home from third, almost unnoticed, and Castor immediately did the same thing, but when Gilardi tried the same stunt he got tagged and retired the side; another was when Fegley got a free trip to first and was caught napping by the first baseman a few moments later; and still another was when someone asked who was up next for Third Ward and he was answered with, "That college guy with the golf outfit on."

Full of exciting plays, each inning had the spectators on edge right up to the last man up for St. Ann's, who vainly tried to equalize the score in the fifth as they had previously done in the second inning.

All participants in the contest put up a good game and kept "Red" Waters, who officiated alone in a very efficient manner, on the run throughout the whole tilt, and kept the fans in a high state of excitement from beginning to end.

MISSIONARY TO CHINA GIVES THRILLING RECITAL OF THE CONDITIONS OF THE ORIENT

Rev. J. Theron Illick and Family Recently Returned To The U. S.—Much Looting Was Done by Soldiers—Tells Of the Shooting of Dr. Williams

The Rev. J. Theron Illick, a former resident of Hulmeville, who for the past several years has been engaged as an instructor at Nanking, China, has written a most interesting account of the uprising in China, to his mother, Mrs. Helen Illick, of Hulmeville.

In the numerous paragraphs, Rev. Illick, who was able to return to the United States with his family and who is now at Olean, N. Y., tells of the manner in which the soldiers looted and in some instances burned the houses of the Americans.

A portion of the letter is here printed, and will be concluded in tomorrow's issue:

The Fall of 1926 and the Spring of 1927 saw the forces of the Nationalist Government slowly but persistently moving northward. Their continual string of victories was due largely to the fact that they were fighting for a cause—the three principles of the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen—the San Min Ju-Yu Nationalism, Democracy and Socialism, each of which had been defined in general terms by Dr. Sun. These principles were gladly adhered to by the Chinese people as they came to know and understand them.

The foreign residents of China also believed that only upon some such principles could a firm national Chinese Government be established. They therefore were one with the Chinese people in silently or openly advocating these three principles. Unfortunately Russian Communism and Sovietism entered the Southern Nationalist Government and thru these agencies defined for themselves these three principles. It is in this modified form that the three principles of Dr. Sun have been taught to the populace by Moscow paid agitators.

The taking of Hankow and the long siege of Wu-Chang was well known. The difficulties and unpleasant experiences encountered at that time were not committed by the Southern soldiers but by the common rabble and labor unions inflamed by Soviet propaganda. As these armies moved northward the real Southern soldiers became fewer in numbers due to death, etc., while their places were taken by Hunanese and Fukienese men. Many of the officers were conservatives or right wing Nationalists and many of these were Christian men, while on the other hand there were many who were of the left radical wing filled with Communist anti-foreign and anti-Christian ideas. These ideas slowly permeated the thinking of many of the Hunanese soldiers—many of them former bandits.

Nanchang and finally Kiakiang fell to the South and later on Hankow, the capital of Chekiang province. In every case the rights of the foreigner and the Chinese were respected by the soldiers. Unpleasant and trying experiences were without number but these came largely from the Soviet instructed populace.

Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek during this time was the leader of the Conservative Right wing and the holder of much power both in military and political affairs. He was not without many adherents among the military and political leaders as well as the general public.

These were the general conditions when the forces of Northern troops entered and passed through Nanking to the south of the city to defend it against the three advancing armies of the Southern forces.

One of these armies was advancing from the west along the Yangtze River—the other from the south and the third from the southeast from Soochow and Shanghai. Both Shanghai and Soochow had fallen to the South several days before they reached Nanking. Of these three armies, one, Gen. Chen Chien was decidedly anti-foreign; another, Gen. Ho was a conservative and follower of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, while the third was apparently of a laissez faire attitude. It must also be stated that Nanking was unique in many ways compared to some of the cities which had fallen to the Southern forces in that there were no foreign concessions and no large business concerns. The foreign population consisted largely of missionaries and those connected with the Chinese Maritime Customs and Post Office.

Any suggested danger at the hands of the Southern forces would have been considered absurd. We were told repeatedly by sincere Chinese friends that foreigners should fear nothing—personal or otherwise, because Gen. Ho would be the one who would enter Nanking. (Gen. Chen Chien was not known, at least not mentioned at that time.) But there was much fear expressed and with good reason, for what might happen to us and the Chinese populace by the retreating Northern troops. In fact the Northern troops anticipated defeat, even though they had entered Nanking literally by the hundreds of thousands. 600,000 troops were said to have passed through the city.

On Sunday, March 20th, in the afternoon English speaking church service the speaker announced that during the week he had been 10 miles out of the city, to the south, to visit some of the Christian workers and had seen no troops of any kind and had heard only very faint sounds of shooting. His conclusion was that we could expect no retreating Northern troops for sometime at least. Monday afternoon, the 21st, the sound of heavy artillery was heard. This continued all night. Late in the night a message came from the American Consul (John K. Davis) for all women and children to prepare to evacuate from the city—at 6 a. m. the next morning. This was the first definite notice to evacuate.

The evacuation was for fear of the retreating Northern troops and presumably was to continue only during this time. Food and clothing were taken for two or three days since they all planned to return after the Southern troops had taken the city. The following morning the evacuation was quickly accomplished by about 9 a. m. of all women and children except a few families where there was sickness and permission had been given to remain. And those who remained had planned to concentrate in certain localities.

Some single women also remained to look after the girl students in the schools for whom they were responsible. And Miss Wilson, our neighbor, had decided to stay with us. Wednesday, the 23rd, the sound of guns became very distinct, both large and small ones. During these three days we continued as usual with classes and our regular routine daily work. (Very many of the students had left previously due to their Southern leanings and consequent fear of the Northern militarists who had been decapitating many pro-Southern individuals.) It was on Wednesday afternoon that Rev. Handel Lee, pastor of one of the large Christian churches of the city, came to see me. He said some of the heavy firing of Tuesday was due to some Northern soldiers fighting among themselves because they rebelled when ordered forward against the Southern troops whom they were afraid of, because of their fierce and fearless methods of fighting.

All Wednesday afternoon Northern troops were retreating through the city and out of the north gate to the river bank to escape to Pukow on the North side of the river. These men were very pleasant as they passed through the city, much to the surprise of all. Late Wednesday night and very early Thursday morning the Southern troops entered the south and west gates of the city. Everyone, Chinese and foreigners, were anticipating a very quiet turnover to the Southern or Nationalist Government as had occurred at Shanghai and Soochow a few days previously. Thursday morning, Dr. Williams went to the home of Dr. Bowen announcing the fact as they sat at the breakfast table that we were in the hands of the Nationalist Government and we were all safe.

Immediately after our breakfast, about 8 o'clock, I told Mrs. Illick since there was so much shooting going on I would stay home and not go to the laboratory. Shortly after this some soldiers were reported to be in Dr. Horton Daniel's yard where they were heard to be repeatedly shooting. Seechew Dr. A. J. Bowen, president of the university, Dr. J. E. Williams, vice-president, and Mr. Lowdermilk, professor of forestry, rapidly walking over I walked out to our gate where I met Mr. James Speers, athletic director of the University Middle School. Mr. Speers and I walked over together. Mr. Harry Clemons, University Librarian, and Mr. Lamson, a language school student, had been the first ones to have arrived (I learned afterward that Mr. Clemons had been threatened and very badly mistreated by these soldiers before our arrival).

There were about nine soldiers dressed in the uniform of the Southern army and heavily armed. They had just finished looting the Daniel home—the loot could be seen on their person. One of them had two loaves of bread under his arm. They continued to shoot at intervals into the air. Dr. Bowen talked with them and told them the Northern troops had already left the city and there was no danger. Up (Continued on Page Four)

RIEKER COMES TO COUNTY JAIL AND THEN TO HOSPITAL

Got Poison at Asbury Park But Refuses To Tell How

CONDITION IS SERIOUS

Little Hope Held Out For The Recovery of Slayer Of Two

(Special to Courier)

DOYLESTOWN, May 20.—The first murderer from Bucks County to enter the gates of the Bucks County Prison in several years, passed through the corridor of the prison on an ambulance stretcher yesterday afternoon hoping to die.

His Bible and the prayers of a Methodist minister was the first request of Ernest Rieker, aged 32, Trenton State House clerk, after he had been placed in a cell after being brought from the Ann Memorial Hospital at Spring Lake, N. J., yesterday in the O. P. James Memorial ambulance.

The double killer did not remain in Bucks County Prison for a long time. Less than two hours after his arrival he was on the way to the Abington Hospital where he is now in a serious condition and under the constant guard of members of the Doylestown sub-station of State Police.

Yesterday morning, in some mysterious manner, Rieker, according to his own statement and according to the information given Sheriff Horace W. Gwinner, of Doylestown, by Spring Lake hospital doctors, took two bichloride tablets in an effort to end his life.

Last February Rieker shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Helen Rieker, aged 23, and then mortally wounded Sheriff Abram L. Kulp, who died on February 24 in the Harriman Hospital, Bristol.

Rieker escaped and the same morning that Sheriff Kulp died, he tried to end his life in a fashionable Asbury Park Hotel by firing two bullets into his own body after sending for a newspaperman to come to his room. Since that time Rieker has been in the Spring Lake hospital.

How or where Rieker, who has been bedfast in the hospital, got the poison tablets, remains a mystery. Sheriff Gwinner said that doctors at the hospital said they did not know how he got the tablets and refused to discuss the affair in detail. A nurse who accompanied the ambulance to Spring Lake yesterday, in answer to a question about the tablets, informed in a few words that "it was nobody's business."

Spring Lake hospital doctors said that in their opinion Rieker could not live more than two weeks. They reported that Rieker was sick at his stomach this morning and vomited up two poison tablets. Rieker told the doctors that he took the tablets about 5 o'clock this morning.

Dr. John A. Fell, of Doylestown, examined Rieker shortly after his arrival at the prison here yesterday and directed that he be sent to Abington Hospital at once. Accompanied by Sheriff Gwinner, Trooper Richard O. Bankert, of the State Police, and a nurse, Rieker was rushed away to Abington, where it is reported his condition is believed to be serious although another day or so will tell better about the result of poison tablets.

Since the murder, Rieker's lips have been sealed so far as details of the murder are concerned.

"I do not care to talk about it," was Rieker's reply to several questions asked him yesterday in the prison cell by District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn.

"Pull down the shade," Rieker asked the nurse and officers yesterday as the ambulance passed the Trenton State House where he was formerly employed in the inheritance tax collection department.

"That is where I used to work, I do not want them to see me," said Rieker as he pointed to the State House buildings.

On the way to the Abington Hospital yesterday, Rieker wore attached to his wrist watch, a small gold locket belonging to his two-year-old daughter, Doris Rieker, whom he wanted to kill after he had slain his wife and Sheriff Kulp, and whom he went after and instead shot at his father-in-law, Clarence D. Oakley, of South Langhorne.

"I feel terrible and I want to die," Rieker said to a newspaper representative yesterday at the Abington Hospital as he was being admitted.

"Where did you get the tablets that you took this morning?" asked the receiving physician at Abington. "I took them at 5 o'clock this morning and they are still in me," Rieker answered, as he nodded his head to (Continued on Page Four)

GOING TO COLLEGE

The college man still furnishes something to argue about. While a majority of persons have faith in college education there remain some who are skeptical about the ability of colleges and universities to help the young man prepare himself for his productive years. The remark is still heard that "college is a waste of time," although few take the remark seriously.

No doubt there is a percentage of young men who enter colleges and universities for their social and athletic possibilities, but it is possible that the least studious can attend classes four years without assimilating some learning and improving the mind in some degree.

There is always the possibility that the youth who goes to college for everything but study will develop into a student while the serious freshman may not develop into a thinker in spite of his desire to study. The question is far from being answered to the satisfaction of all.

CAN'T AFFORD TO BE SICK

On any given day three persons out of a hundred are sick.

Three million persons are on the sick list in the United States today. Sickness costs the United States a billion dollars a year, nearly a half million dollars an hour.

If preventive measures already proved in practice could be made available for every community, a reduction of from 10 to 25 per cent. in casual illness could be averted. From a tenth to a quarter of a billion dollars a year now lost might be saved. A quarter of a million lives annually might be prolonged.

The time may come when it will be a crime to permit a patient to die before he is 75 years old, from a preventable or curable disease, according to a booklet published by Northwestern University, which is authority for all the startling statements that have preceded.

The vivid picture here painted is issued as part of a campaign to obtain funds for a great medical center in the Chicago district where impetus may be given to the concentrating battle against disease.

Many terrors have been driven out of skulking ambush in recent years. Diphtheria, typhoid fever, smallpox, one by one have yielded to the onward march of patient men studying test tubes.

Other entrenchments are yet to be taken. Cancer, tuberculosis, Bright's disease, pneumonia, influenza, will keep restless energy employed for some time to come. Eventually they, too, will be packed off to the limbo of unsheathed spears.

Notable advances have been made in increasing the span of life, but new challenges ever arise to test man's mettle. Heretofore the layman has been calling upon the medicine to run to cover the legions of bacteria that attack his life. Now medicine calls upon the layman to do his part to keep well in the first instance.

Working together, there is nothing that the common sense of the layman and the highly specialized intelligence of the physician cannot do, ultimately.

The real yellow peril is a streak.

We are assured of leaving much to posterity. There are the taxes.

French astronomer says stars marry. Yes, and often, in some instances.

SYNOPSIS

Bob Ward, working his way through college, finds an easy way to earn money—working as a dancing partner, of afternoons, for rich women in a fashionable New Jersey roadhouse. Bob thinks it isn't a fit way to make a living; but, beggars can't be choosers! At last he has ever laid eyes on—Sally, the cigarette girl. Reciprocating his interest, she scorns him against the mysterious and beautiful Mrs. Hammond, habitué of the Inn, who finds her "thrill" in Bob—she is the hunter, not the hunted!

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

Mrs. Hammond knew that she had enslaved Bob mentally, but was baffled at her failure to capture his physical interest. She had felt no responsiveness in his splendid body during the dance. She sensed none now. She said:

"You are coming every day, Bob?"

"If I can arrange my classes, yes, I guess so. I'll have to. I need the money. I guess I can manage to get in my full work by morning and late afternoon and evening lectures."

She was impatient with the mental side of it now, for a spell. She asked:

"Do you like to dance with me only because you are paid to do so?"

Bob was awfully fussed. He lapsed into his boyish tongue-tie.

"No, ma'am—that is—no ma'am!" he spluttered lamely.

Mrs. Hammond took pity, and laughed—oh, so gently. So inoffensively. Made a fellow feel at ease again, right off. She said:

"Then, sir, I'll arrange to have you dance with me—and with me alone—every afternoon!"

Bob was thunderstruck. "But, Della—Mrs. Hammond—ma'am—"

"You will ride to the city with me, won't you, Bob?"

you'd soon get tired of dancing with just me—"

"If I do," she interrupted evenly, "we'll sit out the dances, and talk. Because I'd never get tired of talking to you!"

"That's so nice of you to say," he said. Then, eagerly, "You are so interesting to talk to, for you seem to be interested in what I'm interested in—"

She chuckled at his naivete and said, gaily: "First principles, my boy!"

Of course, he didn't understand that. She had known he wouldn't. And, to cover his lack of understanding, he picked up gingerly where he had left off:

"You've probably met a lot of big, famous men in your social life, Mrs. Hammond. Big engineers!" His eyes glowed with the enthusiastic, dreaming envy of ambitious boyhood.

"Yes," she said, and proceeded to tell him of some. He listened with eyes and ears wide open.

They danced again. This time he did not look at Sally at all. "They are again. This time she talked exclusively of engineers she had known, but was thrilling all the time to the unexampled experiences, in her life, of aching within her whole body, in every fibre and pulse, for some physical reaction, some show of animal spirit from this boy. She would have gladly handed out material reward to the limit of her wealth for one faint sign from Bob Ward that he would like to—kiss her!"

But such a sign was not forthcoming.

So Mrs. Hammond talked of—of things that interested his mind; and sought, all the while, to discover some means of finding the way to interesting his body!

"Have you enjoyed the afternoon, Bob?"

"Yes, Ma'am—err-r, Della."

"Tired?"

"Not a bit!"

"Oh, dear, Bob, but you are unskilful with women!" Her chiding laugh matched the tinkle of ice in the tall glass she was idly fingering. "You should have at least been graceful enough to flatter me a little by perishing the thought that you could be tired from waiting a feathery creature like me about for the better part of the afternoon!"

"But, Ma'am—"

"Bob, please call me Della!"

"—but, Della, I'm not in the habit of thinking up things to say just because they sound good, or for want of something to say."

"Frank you!" Oh, then, perhaps you are saying that I am not a light and ethereal person; that I am somewhat of a burden, which only your super strength kept from being noticeable!"

"No, I didn't mean anything like that either. Why do you think of such things to say? As a matter of fact, you are very light on your feet. The best dancer I've ever met. I could dance with you a lifetime without getting tired."

"Or bored?" hopefully.

"Or bored?" Bob was becoming amused—and, somehow, her interest was getting under his skin, flattering him. It was nice of her to overlook his conversational inadequacy, and just chat along as though he were the best company in the world.

"There, that was lovely of you to say, Bob—it quite compensates for everything!"

Her fingers gave over idling with the slender stem of her glass, and strayed as if by accident across the highly polished table, brushing and resting against one of Bob's big hands. She thrilled at the contact, as a furry cat might luxuriate in the pleasant glow from a fireplace. Bob's flesh shrank a little from the surprise of the touch, but as suddenly pressed back against her fingers. For Bob found the exquisite and fragile texture of her skin not at all unpleasant!

"Bob!" she said tensely, as one pressing a hard captured advantage, "won't you drive home with me? Won't you let me drop you at your campus boarding house?"

"But, good Lord, that's so far up town! I'm sure you couldn't pass by University Heights without going miles out of your way."

"How do you know where I live?" rather sharply.

"I don't know, but I'm quite sure that no one like you lives 'way up in the Bronx!"

Mrs. Hammond laughed. That softly musical, disarming laugh which was like temple bells blended through the murmur of a distant waterfall.

With a sudden, tigerish resolve of daring—though the smile never left her lips—she folded her hand frankly and fully over Bob's. She made it, by a careful outward show, just a gesture of urging; but she was enjoying to the full the ecstasy of having his hand clasped tight in her palm. Her fingered eyes were half-closed; her breathing quick. She said in a very low, very sure, very pleasing way:

"You will ride to the city with me, won't you, Bob?"

His lips had framed, and were on the point of articulating: "Yes." But there came a sudden, unexpected interruption.

A girlish treble—highly surcharged with defensive emotion, which she had not the experience to guard more cunningly.

"Don't forget, Bob, you promised to take me home this evening! Cigarettes, Mrs. Hammond?"

It was Sally speaking—little Sally Smith, the cigarette girl.

And Bob's hand jerked away reflexively from the warm touch of Mrs. Hammond's caressing fingers, as it might have from a live electric wire.

He sat bolt upright, feeling most uncomfortable and unworthy, and stared bewildered into Sally Smith's eyes—into the face of his recaptured dream. He stammered a few incoherent, inaudible things; and reddened a lot. What he wanted to say was that he didn't remember any such thing. It was part and parcel of his nature to be so guilelessly truthful. But somebody in Sally's eyes, some queer brilliancy in the vendor's smile that Sally was smiling at Mrs. Hammond and in the patron's smile that Mrs. Hammond was smiling in return at Sally, gave Bob pause. Then, an instant later, when Sally looked down upon him like a guardian sprite over her adorable shoulder, he decided—or, rather, some puzzling instinct decided for him—that a white lie was very much in order.

"Oh, yes, indeed, I remember. To be sure, we did arrange that—we are to go home together, aren't we, Sally? Ha! Ha!"

Bob felt quite unnecessary. He was unnecessary, in emotion as well as in fact, because he was merely caught between contending women. Indeed, both of whom had forgotten him! And were thinking only of outwitting, outpuzzling each other. Each wondering how much of a hold the other had.

WOMEN WITH BOBBED HAIR VERY

EASILY GET RID OF GRAY HAIR

With Color Glands Normal
Nature Keeps Hair Natural Shade
SENSIBLE ADVICE TO WOMEN TURNING GRAY

Everyone knows if their color glands and hair roots are active and normal they will continue indefinitely to have rich, natural colored hair entirely free of gray, or off-colored locks, so why use dyes or tints?

A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: "If with certain medicines I can stimulate my patient's other organs, why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive, strengthen and tone up these inactive glands so that nature in her own inimitable way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tubes? Surely the hair will then again resume its original shade and color regardless of the users age or previous condition of their hair."

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY
He didn't want an artificial dye or tint and it of course must be harmless and something that could be used for years and years without the slightest injury to hair or scalp. Just like a tonic that builds up a person's strength after some long wasting illness, he wanted a tonic that would revive and stimulate the inactive, weak, or dormant hair roots and color glands.

Under the name of Lea's Hair Tonic anyone may now purchase the scalp food and tonic he finally perfected. For several years hair dressers and specialists have been using it. Results are so natural, gradual and reliable that men as well as women use it.

It doesn't stain the scalp. One friend seldom notices the gradual change and to test what it will do need only apply it to some small spot for a week or two and watch results. Men and women in all walks of life have been amazed at the younger appearance that come with the disappearance of gray hairs from the head. Evidently one need never become gray if they keep the scalp and roots toned up with an occasional massage with Lea's Hair Tonic.

If any reader desires to try a bottle of Lea's Hair Tonic on the maker's absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money back, they should purchase a bottle at the drug store or pin a dollar bill to this advertisement and send with name and address plainly written to Lea's Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md. $1 bottles parcel post anywhere with full directions.

No one need have gray or off-colored hair any more.—(Adv.)

BRISTOL BUILDING ASSOCIATION:—Twice a year a new series is issued. The next series is opened on Monday, June 6, 1927, at the office of the secretary. Yearly more and more of our citizens are becoming stockholders. Likewise many stockholders are taking out new stock in every series. In seven years this will provide them with a regular income as the stock matures. Your stock will buy you a home; educate your children; care for you when your earning capacity grows less. If you are spending all you make you are forgetting that the time is coming when your earning days will cease. Subscribe with any of the following: Louis Spring, president; Thomas Scott, treasurer; Gustave A. Rathke, James Guy, Horace N. Davis, Louis C. Spring; Howard I. James, secretary, 205 Radcliffe street, Bristol, Pa. 5-16-11

BRISTOL'S PAY ROLL has increased 50% in the last two years. That means that Bristol real estate is a good buy now. Properties can be financed on Building Association installment mortgages. If you want to buy a property and make a profit on its increase in value, take stock now in the Merchants and Mechanics Building Association. A new series is being issued this month. It pays to save. Slayer Tries Suicide Rather Than Face Murder Charge inform the doctor that he did not care to tell where he got the poison tablets.

"I want to die and I am going to die," Rieker said as the newspaper reporter said good-bye to him.

Since the double slaying Rieker has grown pale and thin. His temperature has remained about the 100 mark for more than a month. He has one bullet in his chest and the other was removed at Spring Lake. Nobody but members of his family have been able to see him.

Last night, Sheriff Gwinner gave orders to keep all visitors away from Rieker and to allow nobody to see him, except the guard, nurses and doctors.

As Rieker was being admitted to the county prison yesterday afternoon, a number of prisoners got a quick glimpse at the slayer of former Sheriff Kulp who was known as the "big-hearted" officer. The prisoners stood mute as the stretcher passed by and then an expression of revenge was quite noticeable on the faces of many as one was heard to say to another: "It would be a good thing if he could die."

Rieker's last desperate effort to end his life, it is believed will be successful. In case he recovers he will be returned to the Bucks County Prison, arraigned on a charge of murder and will, if physically able, be tried at the September term of criminal court of Bucks County.

It was stated by physicians today that he spent a fairly comfortable night, and his condition today is said to be good.

great assistance to the boys of the school in connection with their manual training. Their part of the display consists of electric table lamps, blueprints, bootblack stands, book troughs, clothes trees, footstools, smoking stands, wooden bulb container, etc.

On one of the small table lamps has been placed an attractive shade, made with the crystalline and beads. The work on the several articles made of wood has likewise taken much time, and the grain has been well brought out.

The art exhibit is one of merit, and includes such as advertisements in colors, etchings in black and white effect, nature pictures in water colors, and numerous others.

The pupils have shown splendid response to the work done under the leadership of the instructors along these lines, and the practice and experience gained will surely be of much benefit not only during their life in school, but in after years, and may perhaps further their specific callings later.

Missionary To China Gives Thrilling Recital Of The Conditions In The Orient

on being asked who they were they replied they belonged "to the Southern army." Dr. Bowen made some other remarks that now everything was fine and we were all safe. They made no reply but continued their reckless shooting into the air.

We now moved out of the gate of the compound, the soldiers walking with us. Passing our house, my small boy, Paul, six years old, opened the front door to see what was going on. Immediately one of the soldiers shot toward the house. The bullet went wild, breaking the tile on the roof. Some of our party remonstrated with the soldier saying, "don't be afraid, that was only a small American boy."

All the time we felt they thought we might be taking them into a trap of Northern soldiers but at the same time we could not understand their peculiar attitude. Arriving at the corner of our yard and the community tennis courts, I turned to go into our yard but pre-emptorily was demanded by the soldiers to come back which I immediately did. They then began going through our clothes, taking everything they considered of value. The first soldier to go over me got $1 in Chinese money, and my ring. I had some small money but he refused it. My keys and handkerchief were not wanted. My assistance was not very great so that my watch, chain, scholastic keys, pens, were not seen. I was wearing a house jacket fastened by one button. I had not attempted to open the fastening and neither had the soldier, which evidently had saved these things. But the next soldier saw the chain and key which he immediately traced to my vest pocket and pulled the whole thing out with an exclamation of joy. The pens were never seen. During this looting of our persons, one of the soldiers shot Dr. Williams through the head, killing him almost instantly. Dr. Williams had been standing about 12 feet away from me and just what had been said, if anything, by Dr. Williams, I do not know. (Those near him report that Dr. Williams slightly remonstrated against them taking his watch). His body was further looted after he fell. The shooting whether reckless or intentional, I do not know; possibly it was both. After they had taken everything of value they could find, the soldiers walked east toward the Hummel home which is toward the main street.

Mr. Speers stayed with the body of Dr. Williams and Dr. Bowen went to the University hospital for medical assistance, while the rest of us left the place immediately. Very soon Mr. Chang Sing-fu, the university athletic director, appeared and took charge of the body. By this time many of the Chinese populace began to gather.

They did not appear to be excited but took the shooting as a matter of course. Two of the university hospital nurses, Misses Van Vleet and Hunt, now rapidly approached with two orderlies and a stretcher. The Chinese seeing some more soldiers approaching, told the nurses to move on quickly lest the soldiers attack them. They saw that Dr. Williams was already dead and as they hastened on, going to the home of Dr. Bowen, Mr. Chang and the orderlies took the body of Dr. Williams to his home.
